Dear Colleague,

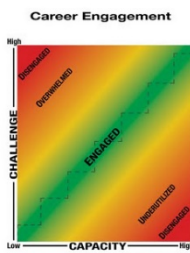

CERIC, invites you to attend a free networking breakfast meeting to discover and discuss some key findings around Career Engagement with Dr Roberta Neault, an award-winning career development authority based in B.C and co-editor of CERIC's newly released book Career Theories and Models at Work: Ideas for Practice. This meeting is also a great opportunity to network with other professional peers from organizations with an interest in career development as well as to learn more about programs and services from CERIC that will be of value to you.

Monday, May 13, 2019

8:30 am – 10:30 am

Delta Hotel by Marriott Beausejour, 750 Main St, Moncton, NB

This is an inclusive event and we want to hear from all who have a stake in matters related to career and employment counselling and HR, including employers, career advisors and educators.

Dr Neault's Career Engagement model (co-developed with Dr. Deirdre Pickerell) situates maximum engagement to occur at the intersection of challenge and capacity. Too much challenge for the available capacity can be overwhelming; too little challenge, on the other hand, leaves people feeling underutilized. Being excessively overwhelmed or chronically underutilized is the path to disengagement.

In this meeting you will learn:

- How to identify the signs of career disengagement
- The individual and the organizational responsibility for career engagement
- How to engage and re-engage jobseekers and employees

This research brings together two groups who have typically worked in silos: career practitioners and HR professionals, whose integrated supports and shared insights can benefit both individuals and organizations. The model has even broader application, including with high school students, foreign-trained professionals and retirees.

Our goal is for you to:

- gain knowledge of the book's findings and their implications for career development;
- build your network of local individuals and organizations that are engaged in different facets of career development; and,
- learn about some exciting initiatives, programs and services from CERIC that will be of value to you in your ongoing work.
